Do you remember your first day on the job?

- You went to bed early – you got to work early.
- You tried hard to do your best.
- You were appreciative of your new job opportunity and excited to make a great impression.

Over time, something happened: the initial excitement and enthusiasm faded away. It started to feel like “just a job.”

As a healthcare professional, you spend years acquiring the knowledge and skill to be a great doctor, you build your office with the best systems and technology available, but you ultimately succeed by having a great staff.

Gale Stoner speaks on the core issues that doctors and staff face on a daily basis.

Gale’s keynote and workshops focus on four things:

- Awareness – What does your patient really want?
- Direction – Is your staff aware of the goals of your practice?
- Perception – Staff and management will have an opportunity to understand each other’s priorities and perspectives.
- Accountability – A challenge to the entire staff to be responsible for their actions.

why hire gale?

After listening to Gale, your audience will have more focus on doing the right things the right way; more clarity on customer communication; more commitment to the vision of the organization; and more harmony. People bring the right attitude to work each day.

about gale

With over 37 years of leadership experience and a B.S. in Healthcare Management, nothing has affected Gale’s perspective on business success like his own heart attack nearly 13 years ago. His first-hand tenure as a patient brought an entirely new dimension to his work. From that point forward, Gale began to see customer service through the patient’s eyes, giving him a new understanding of the strategic role of staff/leadership dynamics.
